

Imagine's premiere space magazine celebrates 50 issues

Long-running popular astronomy magazine reaches milestone issue

March 2016 sees All About Space, Imagine Publishing's unique and accessible space magazine, hit its landmark 50th issue. To celebrate this impressive milestone, All About Space will reveal the 50 most amazing discoveries in space-science and astronomy, as voted by its readers in an all-encompassing survey organised by the magazine.

Partnering with respected organisations such as the National Space Centre, The Royal Astronomical Society and the International Astronomical Union, the All About Space reader survey invited participants to select the advances and insights that have contributed most to furthering our understanding of the amazing universe we live in. The results will be published in the special 50th Anniversary issue, on sale worldwide on 31 March.

"Looking back at how All About Space has developed up to this point has been incredible," said astronomer and Deputy Editor Gemma Lavender. "Hitting issue 50 is a massive achievement that's been made even better with the input of the magazine's valuable readers."

Editor in Chief, Dave Harfield, added: "I'm incredibly proud of what we've achieved with All About Space and it remains the most unique space magazine on the market. No other magazine is as accessible or as comprehensive, making information on astronomy, science and astrophysics understandable to all. I'm looking forward to seeing what we can achieve over the next 50 issues."

Established in 2012, All About Space has since cemented its reputation for combining stunning images with accessible and authoritative text to educate and inspire readers of all ages, while taking them on a spectacular journey through the Solar System to the known limits of the universe. After 50 issues, All About Space remains a brand dedicated to delivering expert commentary on the latest cutting-edge research, technology and theories in an entertaining and visually stunning way.
